On page 1, please amend the paragraph contained in lines 20-29 as follows:

With the characteristics of the first independent claim, according to which a winding machine with a carrier device for winding a winding for an electrical machine is provided, and this winding machine has at least one group comprising a winding template and an adjacent deflection element, and the winding template and the adjacent deflection element are displaceable relative to one another, have the advantage that as a result, each individual winding template is freely accessible for being wound, making industrially suitable production of an integrally embodied winding with a plurality of loops possible. With the provisions recited in the dependent claims, advantageous refinements of the winding machine of the first independent claim are possible.
